Erratum

Apologies to Taral Wayne, because last month, despite multiple proof-readings, I somehow failed to notice that his article in that issue wasn't listed in the table of contents on the cover.

Dear BCSFAers,

Ah yes, looking forward to seeing the movie Hugo—but, as always, I'll be content to await its appearance on Netflix's list.

Hope all and sundry had pleasant and safe holidays. With the new year comes the start of the merry scramble in the various award arenas. Once again I hope all readers who are eligible will fill out the Hugo nomination ballot. Fill out all the blanks and spread the egoboo around!

I see issues #459, 460, 461, and 462. I am not getting a whole lot better at the organization thing, but at least I managed to locate four issues! All four sport Foster covers—never get tired of them!

Hmm—Ethics in SF—hope Lynda Williams gets contributions.

Lloyd, I guess I just figured all areas got in the audio book business—never entered my mind that it might actually be centered in a specific spot (since it seems to be something that could be done anywhere there is an audio recording studio).

Hopefully VCon did get all your stuff—maybe I will find out as I go through the three remaining issues.

Even though this was not the goal—thank you for the editorial comments on Dale Speirs' fanac. I must admit that his various issues always have things of interest. Some of the topics seem a bit afield, but manage to fit right into fannish context.

[In what sense, not the goal?]

On my refrigerator is a want list. I put brighter battery powered lamps (for power outages) [on the list] about two years ago. I keep reading the extensive list of wants—and so far have not actually done anything toward finding one. Yeah—RSN.

I'll check out Netflix—I think they have Red Dwarf episodes there. There is almost zero likelihood I can find the start of the series currently running on TV. Just a minute—I'll check Netflix right now...Okay—found it as both discs and 24-hour streaming—will try to get a look at the first few as soon as I find time in a chunk. Put it right in my queue.

A new bookstore actually opened up about 12 miles away—last October. It is in an historical old store and has a lot of personality. Inside it has not been renovated at all. I took a look around. Sigh, really miss a bookstore!

[I discovered a second-hand-book store in Steveston (a historic village here in Richmond), where I was able to add The Stars, Like Dust, The Currents of Space, Pebble in the Sky, Second Foundation, and The Naked Sun to my collection of 1980s Del Rey editions of Isaac Asimov books.]

Well, I have a huge backlog (let me see—nah, happenings here are just too depressing to really right now—take my word for it that things have been busy)—and I have not had the time to sketch for far too long. I must figure out how to make time to draw.

Again—if you are qualified to nominate—please do so—your Hugo (uh...you know what I mean) will thank you!

Bye,
Sheryl

Hey here hi there ho there, neighborinos (you know, the elementary particle of neighborliness?). Another month, another LOC. If I don't watch myself, I am going to start taking you people for granted. The gods forbid.

Love Brad Foster's accordion skyscraper, and his art in general. There's a wacky cheerfulness to his art that I find incredibly appealing.

[I agree. Well-put! I like how this month's "Cubosaur" reminds me of an alien I might have seen in my favourite 1980s cartoons.]

Wow, a LOC from Spider Robinson! We're in the big leagues now. Sad to hear he has trouble leaving the house, but I can totally relate, being agoraphobic. I would rather have a virtual Spider at VCon than no Spider at all, and if that's what works for him, I am all for it.

[A recluse Spider, as it were.]

Avril Errol: brilliant CanCon drag name! Arrow is a legit last name, though. Too on the nose?

[I thought so at the time. Now I'm not sure.]

Re: "As Others See Us? IV": Once more, the mainstream media demonstrates its complete inability to understand that science fiction can be good. They think if it's good, it must be something other than science fiction, a priori, something impossible to define (speculative fiction? slipstream?) in such a way that it does not include science fiction. Science fiction has been thus abused for its entire century plus of existence. Somehow, the social stigma of being a "geek" or a "nerd" comes to include all things we like...geek by association, I suppose. And hence, even the liberal minded literati crowd looks down on us as beyond the pale, even though we're cut from the same non-alpha cloth. Pathetic.

[Sam Ramer wrote in The Joy of Trek journalists do this because they are geeks in denial.]

I better stop now, before I get all ranty. See ya next month, folks!

Dear Felicity:

The printed issue of BCSFazine 464 just arrived yesterday, but I have had the .pdfed version here to look at, so here are some comments on it.

The cover illo...I don't think I'd mind the accordion building, as long as it didn't play Lady of Spain as it compressed. Decades ago, I had one year of accordion lessons...and that was quite enough.

Hello to Spider! I think we understand why you stay at home...we mourn with you. But still, we'd like to see you, party with you and have Beatles jams with you, and believe me, you are missed. The Skype solution is a good one for distant conventions, but it's just not the same. Wish Scotty'd get those transporters up and running, hm?

Me and work...well, I didn't get the job I wrote about, but a local advertising agency seems quite interested in me. They gave me a day's work earlier in the week, and after the upcoming Family Day long weekend, I will be working four more days for them. This may be the beginning of getting hired. Fingers crossed, etc. I am so sick to death of looking for work.

William Gibson did come to Toronto, and for his appearance here, he was interviewed by Robert J. Sawyer. I still work evenings, so was unable to go to his appearance, but this is the price paid for doing what you have to do to make a buck.

As Taral feels he's been superseded by newer furry fans, I sometimes feel the same has happened to me in local Toronto fandom. New fans arrive all the time, and several large groups sound like they've invented fandom all by themselves, being totally unaware of the fandom that's already there. When I discover these new groups, I try to reach out to them, invite them to what's already happening, and the groups meet. I hope the gaps in the generations won't be a hindrance to meeting and mingling.

[Good for you for doing so! Even if fandom changes into something we don't recognize, there should still be continuity.]

Canadian fandom needs a quick reminder that the deadline for nominations for this year's Aurora Awards is a short time away. Same goes for the Hugos...feels like they are very early this year.

[The deadline for the new nominations is already coming up? It seems like we just awarded the last batch a month ago!]

Not a lot else is happening. Ad Astra happens in about two months, and we are looking forward to it. After that is a high tea Yvonne and I have organized for the local steampunk groups, and a steampunk street fair right in downtown Toronto. We won't be bored. Thanks for another issue, see you with the next one.

[Thanks for another LOC!]

Yours,

Lloyd Penney

10 February 2012: Fontana Friday—Game of Thrones, 6:30–7:30 PM at La Fontana Caffè 3701 Hastings Street, Burnaby. “You said you wanted it...Well, game on! We’re going to watch season one of Game of Thrones and continue straight on to season two when it airs in April. Warning: This show will contain mature subject matter, scenes of violence, coarse language and nudity. Viewer discretion is advised! Seriously folks, this show is graphically violent and has a ton of sex and nudity. I hope the actors put some work into buffing up before filming, because I understand we are going to be seeing a lot of them! I've posted this shindig to start at 6:30 PM to allow time for people to arrive, order food and socialize. We will watch episodes 1 & 2 of Game of Thrones starting shortly after 8 PM (so that I can get there from yoga).”—Keith Lim

11 February 2012: Our Bloody Valentine's Day Shindig, 11:00 AM–12:00 PM at Oak Street Blood Donor Clinic, 4750 Oak Street, Vancouver. “Celebrate Valentine's Day this year by making an appointment to donate blood! If you don't want to go to the Oak Street clinic, you can find a clinic near you on the Canadian Blood Services website. Call ahead to make an appointment: 1-888-2-DONATE. If this is your first time and you are not sure you are ready to donate, or if you don't want to or cannot donate for whatever reason, you can still come to the clinic to hang with your Browncoat peeps while they donate to show them your support. In your RSVP, please make a note of the time of your appointment, which clinic you will be attending and whether you have donated previously. You don't need to be a Slayer to save lives!”—Keith Lim

11 February 2012: Meet with Marissa Meyer, the author of Cinder, a new YA dystopian fairy tale, 2:00–3:00 PM at Chapters Metrotown, 4700 Kingsway, Burnaby. Free! “Come meet Marissa Meyer, get your copy signed, ask some questions and hear her read from Cinder.”—Keith Lim

12 February 2012: Making Möbius Magic \(& Dancing Dead\), 3:00–5:00 PM at La Fontana Caffè, 3701 Hastings Street, Burnaby. Creative Geeks Society. “You've seen my Möbius shawl? You want to make one? The pattern is very simple and satisfying for when you want to produce something fast. And you end...”—Keith Lim

12 February 2012: Dancing Zombies & Walking Dead, 5:00–6:00 PM at La Fontana Caffè, 3701 Hastings St, Burnaby. “Time for another thrilling dance rehearsal. The Browncoats have a Reaver Dance Troupe, and we're looking to recruit more members to dance to MJ's 'Thriller' at Thrill the World in October (and any other chance we get). Last time we got together (January 22nd) we learned the first half of the dance. This time we're going to focus on the second half. But don't worry if you didn't make it to the last session. No reason you can't learn the back half of the dance first. We'll be having another session to work on the first half again in March. The Creative Geeks will be at the Caffè crafting and laughing from 3 PM. You are welcome to come join us, even if you don't have a project to work on. At 5 PM we'll spend one hour dancing (read: shambling and stumbling around). You do not have to dance! You can come cheer/jeer the dancers on, but be nice because we like to eat your brains!!! After that, in keeping with the zombie mood, we're going to watch The Walking Dead. Critically acclaimed (and bloody awesome) AMC original series The Walking Dead has returned for the second half of season two, and we are so excited! After 6 PM the TV will go on so those who want can watch the newest episode called 'Nebraska.' For those of you who haven't seen it yet and want to get caught up AMC (channel 53) is marathoning season one on February 11th starting at 5 PM and the first half of season 2 on February 12th starting at 10:30 AM, winding up with the first new episode since last November starting at 6 PM.”—Keith Lim

15 February 2012: Liana K.'s birthday.

16 February 2012: Sci-Fi and the Courage to Hope, 7:30 PM at Unitarian Church of Vancouver, 949 W. 49th Ave., 604-874-9982. "Science fiction author Lynda Williams talks about stories of utopia and dystopia and how they affect us. Refreshments to follow. More information at lkazdan@shaw.ca. Free admission."—EarthFurst to BC Sci-Fi Assc.

17 February 2012: Premiere of films Ghost Rider: Spirit of Vengeance (superhero; Nicolas Cage, Ciarán Hinds, Christopher Lambert, Anthony Head) and The Secret World of Arrietty (fantasy; Will Arnett, Carol Burnett, Peter Jason, Amy Poehler).

17–19 February 2012: Tsukino-Con. Anime and Japanese cultural convention at University of Victoria, 3800 Finnerty Road, Victoria, Engineering and Computer Science building. Anime Club, UVic Students' Society, University of Victoria, PO Box 3035 STN CSC, Victoria, BC, V8W 3P3. UVic students get in free. (Pre-registration appears to be online-only.)—Julian Castle

19 February 2012: Naked Girls Reading—Bust Of!, 7:30–10:30 PM at the Backstage Lounge, 1585 Johnston Street, Vancouver. "Vancouver's biggest Naked Girls Reading yet! We've gotten so many requests to hear some of the crowd favorites again that we're doing a Best Of show...or should that be Bust Of! Oh...oh...oh...oh...oh...oh...oh! It's also our own Blonde Bombshell's birthday, so come on out and help celebrate. Starring Maggie Pie, Trixie Hobbitses, Malvina Masvino, Mama Fortuna, Bunny Meugens, Kitty Kitty Bang Bang, and special guest star: the Samantha Mack! with our Mistress of Ceremonies Diamond Minx. $15/$20 advance, $5 more at the door. 19, 22, and 23 February 2012: Sita Sings the Blues, 1 PM on 19 February and 8:30 PM on 22–23 February at Pacific Cinémathèque, 1131 Howe Street, Vancouver. Wikipedia says SSTB is "a 2008 animated feature film...by American artist Nina Paley...It intersperses events from the Ramayana, illustrated conversation between Indian shadow puppets, musical interludes voiced with tracks by Annette Hanshaw and scenes from the artist's own life....Roger Ebert...enthused, "I am enchanted...To get any film made is a miracle. To conceive of a film like this is a greater miracle." Cinematheque website says "Sita may be the first animated feature released under a Creative Commons license, which permits free usage—a move necessitated by complicated copyright issues that arouse over its use of old songs Paley believed were in the public domain."—Julian Castle

21 February 2012: Crystal Remedios's birthday.

22–23 February 2012: Ottawa International Animation Festival’s Best of Ottawa Tour, 7 PM at Pacific Cinémathèque, 1131 Howe Street, Vancouver. “The Best of Ottawa programme showcases many audience favorites and award winners from the OIAF Official Competition. This year’s highlights include Pjotr Sapegin’s heart-warming The Last Norwegian Troll...and the hilarious crowd-favourite The Goat and the Well.”—Julian Castle

24 February 2012: Premiere of film The Fairy (fantasy).

24 February 2012: Cinema Sewer #25/Sleazy Slice #5 Launch Party! WEEEEEE, 6:00–9:00 PM at Pulp Fiction Books, 2422 Main Street, Vancouver. “It’s the once-a-year Cinema Sewer launch event, and it’s happening at Pulp Fiction books again! C’mon out and hang with us for a bit and enjoy yourself! I say it’s OK, so it is OK. Book stores are the best, amIrite? Also great: chocolate. Man, am I tired. Heeeyy, look over there: more info about the new publications I put out: cinemasewer.com.”—Robin Bougie

25 February 2012: Alyx Dellamonica’s birthday.

29 February 2012: Leap Day. Superman’s birthday.

March 2012

2 March 2012: Premiere of films Dr. Seuss’s The Lorax (computer animation/fantasy; Zac Efron, Taylor Swift, Betty White, Ed Helms, Danny DeVito, Rob Riggle, Dee Bradley Baker, Marina Sirtis) and Tim and Eric’s Billion Dollar Movie (comedy; Eric Wareheim, Tim Heidecker, John C. 10 March 2012: Geeks After Dark V: With Great Sexy Comes Great Responsibility, 6:00–10:30 PM at the Cellar Nightclub, 1006 Granville Street, Vancouver. “Who am I? You sure you want to know? The story of my life is not for the faint of heart. If somebody said it was a happy little tale...if somebody told you this was just your average, ordinary club night...somebody lied. Whatever life holds in store for me, I will never forget these words: ‘Hey, I’m kind of busy Friday night. Maybe give Saturdays a shot?’ So we set the show up for Saturday. That is our gift. That is our curse. That is...Geeks After Dark V: With Great Sexy Comes Great Responsibility! That’s right, hot on the heels of our last event, we’re coming out again with a great show. We just couldn’t keep ourselves away from you wonderful folks after our editor, a moustachioed, cigar-chomping tyrant demanded pictures of a certain wall-crawling, web-spinning...Yes, fine, it’s Spider-Man themed. There’s only so much we can draw this out, really. Geeks After Dark is now going to be coming at you faster and harder than ever, so get ready! All the ladies, all the dancing, all the prizes and all the nerdy madness you can handle! Sponsored by GameDeals, Golden Age Collectables, Gotham Collectables, and The Connection Games! Check out our hosts J. Jonah Jameson with his on-site photographer Peter Parker for an amazing evening of burlesque, trivia, comedy and the best geeky dance music since the Cantina Band went on tour! Featuring an amazing lineup of nerdlesquers but including fan favourites like: Sherry Hymen, Dollie Nox, Misty Meanor, Chai Tea, Sweet Sashay; Stage Kitty/Balloon Girl is the Vixen from Venus, the Seductress from the Stars, the Time Twirling Tassels of Tomorrow, the Dame in Lace from Outer Space, Newcomer Iva Raygun! Doors: 6:00 PM . Show: 6:30 PM. Dance party craziness: 7:30 PM! Featuring music from: ’90s cartoons! geeky movies and tv shows! nerd-core rap! video games! and user requests! Leave yours in the comments, and if we can shake our things to it (thing-shaking is a patented process), we’ll put it on the playlist. Now, unsheathe your adamantium claws, strap on your arc reactor powered armor, shine up your no-prizes and get ready to party! Excelsior, fans, and make mine Geeks After Dark! Tickets at the door: $10 in costume, $12 without so dress to the 9s!”—Geeks After Dark via Cormorant Hadoken Russball

Notes from January 2012 BCSFA Meeting

In attendance were Graeme Cameron (president), Barb Dryer (secretary), Kathleen Moore (treasurer), Ray Seredin (host), Felicity Walker (editor), Michael “Fruvous” Bertrand, Julian Castle, Joe Devoy, and William Graham.

We phoned Sidney Trim to offer our condolences on the passing of his mother. Barb also brought a card for all of us to sign.

Graeme brought books from the late Al Betz’s collection—Rocket Genius by Charles Spain Verral (about Robert Goddard), Disturbing the Universe by Freeman Dyson, The World of Science Fiction by Lester del Rey, The Science Fiction Encyclopedia, edited by Peter Nicholls, and Bleepers in Space (no author given; published by DC Comics).

Ray talked about boats.

We reminisced about silent reading period in school.

Graeme talked about a book he was reading about Pierre Trudeau. Surprisingly, it said that the young Trudeau was a fascist and antisemite, but that was the climate of separatist Quebec in those days. It was in the schools, the church, and the government, so it was unavoidable. Fortunately, once Trudeau had travelled a little, he improved.

I thought I heard a toilet flush out in the street. Ray remembered his school (in Powell River) testing the PA system by flushing the toilet in the principal's bathroom. Graeme said that President Johnson would continue meetings while using the toilet, as an expression of power. This made me think of the King of the Hill episode with the flashback to the first of what would be many times that Buck Strickland made Hank Hill talk to him in the bathroom, saying, "Hank, join me in my 'office,' I got to take a grunt...I promise I won't make a habit of this."

Several of us agreed that one of the worst things about prison, judging from the movies, would be the toilets. Fruvous said that when the Marquis de Sade was imprisoned and denied writing materials, he wrote his manuscript in his own feces. Graeme said that publishers sometimes received poo manuscripts, and other gimmicks, such as purple ink on pink paper, from writers trying to stand out and get noticed. A Doubleday editor received a submission with the note: "By the time you read this, I will have shot myself." One author wrote The Diary of a Drunken Sod on a beer barrel. (Despite the imaginative choice of format, it was only mildly entertaining, so the publisher passed.)

William Gibson once asked Graeme to identify a movie he'd seen as a kid, and find him a copy if possible. All he could remember was that "the monster was the shadow of a lobster." Graeme instantly knew it had to be Teenagers from Outer Space (1959), and as luck would have it, he had an extra copy.

Announcement

R. Graeme Cameron is pleased to announce he has given birth to a bouncing baby hernia. The Graeme went under the knife this morning about 9:45 AM, where doctors were amazed to find out that the hernia was a good deal larger than initially believed to be, and required much more work than previously thought. He was released from the hospital at 5:00 PM, wherein his wife made him jog home from the hospital behind the cab. He is currently shuffling about the house in his green plaid boxer shorts, with an enormous bruise on his belly and in a great deal of pain. Well-wishes may be posted here or emailed to rgraeme@shaw.ca, and friends who have our number are welcome to call. He's going to be pretty much laid up for two or three weeks, and should make a full recovery in six weeks.

As Others See Us? V

“The GOP presidential candidates continue to play their parts in an implausible story of a world that could never exist, acting out nonexistent conflicts while delivering dialog that insults the intelligence [sic]. That’s not because they’re stupid. It’s because they think you are. It’s like watching a low budget science-fiction movie from the fifties: Dr. Strange vs. the Vulture in the Caverns of the Moon. It’s badly executed, even by the low standards of its genre, complete with cheap sets, bad special effects and wooden acting.”—Richard (RJ) Eskow, “Last Night’s GOP Debate Was Like Bad 1950’s-Style [sic] Science-Fiction,” Nation of Change [There are more SF analogies in the rest of the article.—Felicity]

Zalman King

Writer and director Zalman King died on Friday, aged 69, following a lengthy battle with cancer. Although he used his script credit on 9½ Weeks to launch a successful career in softcore erotica in both movies and cable TV, King began as an actor, his genre appearances including Blue Sunshine (1978) and Galaxy of Terror (1981). His role in The Young Lawyers (1969–71) led to him being singled out for praise in Harlan Ellison's TV column, later anthologised as The Glass Teat.

‘Globe and Mail’ ‘Social Studies’: University and TV Clown

From “Social Studies” by Michael Kesterton in The Globe and Mail:

“University offers course on Occupy movement...Occupy Everywhere, a three-credit political science course offered at Roosevelt University that takes a look at the movement and the issue of social inequality in the United States.”

And:

“In Brazil...In 2010, the largest number of votes for any member of congress went to Tiririca, a popular TV clown, who ran on the slogan, ‘I don’t know what a congressman does, but vote me in and I’ll tell you.’...”

One Average Meeting in Space

Michael Bertrand

Bowshawm’s upper antenna quivered with irritation. Why was he even here? He was an engineer. He almost never dealt with the public. So why did he have to know all about some new species, fresh from their admission to the League and eager to explore all their new possibilities? All he needed to know about these rubes was their basic biology and a rough idea of their psychology and that was it. Then he could retreat back to his design lab and design the environmental systems that would keep them alive and happy and content while they stayed with his employers, Sun Rising Resorts. He didn’t need some stupid social etiquette lecture about which appendage they dipped in their tea or whatever.

Still, Bowshawm dutifully slotted his thorax into the cup-shaped clamp that his bio-form used as a chair and trained all eight of his eyes and both sets of antennae on the speaker who was arranging her notes on the podium at the center of the conference room. Truth was, though he would never admit it, despite his carping and griping any time he was forced to leave his lab, Bowshawm was far too ambitious and career oriented to make waves by making his complaints even faintly official. He did what thousands of similar sentiments had done in his situation: did as he was told, and kept his grumbling to himself.

“Thank you all for coming,” said the sleek furry creature at the podium. Like I had a choice, Bowshawm grumbled to himself. He peered at her but could not place her name or species. Some middle management mammal, anyhow. The new species must be warmblooded.

“I will try to be brief and just cover the basics of Entet etiquette, as I am sure you all have jobs you are eager to return to, and there are only a few things we all absolutely must know,” she continued. That’s what they all say, thought Bowshawm, and then three hours later you are still there and ready to break off your own neural spines just to survive the boredom.

“The first and most important thing you need to understand about the Entet is where we at Sun Rising Resorts fit into their society, and for that, we need to look at their life cycle.” Here it comes, thought Bowshawm. Soon, we’ll be looking at diagrams of their entire genetic history.

“The Entet are mammals and built along the basic biped bio-form, but they are seaborne. They live almost their entire lives in and on their home planet’s plentiful seas and rivers, and only go to land for a few very special reasons. The one we’re most interested in today is birth.” Oh no, not mammalian birth rituals, thought Bowshawm, those are so disgusting compared to nice clear orderly ovi-deposit. Wait, sea mammals? But I just finished their environmental design, and there isn’t even a bathtub, let alone the large pools and tanks sea creatures usually request.

“As their young cannot swim until three weeks after birth, the Entet must give birth on dry land and raise their young there ’til they are of swimming age. This means that, despite being an almost entirely sea-based life form, they all have early memories of a time when they were on solid land, being tended to by highly attentive parents who did nothing but feed them and groom them all day long. Then, once they reach swimming age, their parents shove them into icy cold water and they have to fend for themselves.” What, without even a cocoon of food to sustain them? Still, that explains a few things, thought Bowshawm. Like the deep cushioned pit, and the room temperature so much higher than the species baseline. They seek to recreate their earliest childhood. I wonder if this is one of those complicated mammalian mating rituals?

“The vital thing to take away from all this is that, despite being a highly gregarious and uninhibited species, they consider that time in their lives to be deeply shameful and therefore have a very potent societal taboo against mentioning it or even admitting that it happens. And yet, with League help, their scientists have discovered that the only treatment for the wide range of psychological issues that plague the Entet population after their third or fourth decade of life can be directly traced to this early childhood trauma, and so the only treatment is to take the patient back through that time of their life, but this time, have them go through the transition from land to water more gently and gradually.” Oh, thought Bowshawm. That must be where we come in.

“That’s where we come in. We are providing the facilities, but most importantly, we are providing the discretion. No matter what their scientists say, the taboo about this time of their lives is still incredibly strong and pervasive, and if a facility was located on one of their own planets, their curious and adventurous cohorts would undoubtedly find out who was there, and much shame and political fallout would likely occur. So they are counting on us to keep things very, very quiet.

“What that boils down to for us employees is that we must not mention the real reason the Entet are coming here to anyone, especially them. As far as everyone... and I do mean everyone...who is not in this room is concerned, the Entet come here strictly to relax and meet new species. You are not to refer to their therapy, the modifications made to their rooms, or any other aspect of their visits here that would imply they are here for any other reason than rest and recreation.”

Oh pod-smut, no! thought Bowshawm, a horrible chill going through him from spiracles to spinnerettes. I just sent a bulletin to my entire working group, subordinates included, detailing my entire environmental design because I found it so unusual. Please end the meeting now, please please let this be the end of the meeting. I still have time to cancel it before any of them read it. Maybe. I hope.

“That’s all you need to know for now. For those of you in the front-line service positions, this lecture will continue to cover their greeting rituals, eating habits, and so on. But the rest of you may leave.”

Bowshawm was already scurrying for the exit, nearly bowling over two other sentients in his haste, by the time she finished speaking. He would make all the necessary apology offerings to those he had offended later. Now, he had to get back to his lab and cancel that bulletin before it wrecked his career by making him seem careless, or far worse...non-cosmopolitan.

There was no worse crime in the Sun Rising chain’s eyes than being intolerant of other races. They would put up with it from guests, but never even a hint of it from their employees.

As he dashed back to his beloved lab as fast as his eight rubbery legs would take him, his mind was transfixed on the image of his supervisor, an elongated rodent of the Chrop species, looking down on him, nose twitching in angry disapproval, his ill timed bulletin on the Chrop’s screen.

But somewhere on that fateful trip back, he also decided that he should send a message to his progenitor group, thanking them for the kindness and consideration they had shown in raising him.

Suddenly, he felt that he’d never really appreciated them until now.

Zines Received

‘Opuntia’ #71.3 (February 2012). Published by Dale Speirs, Box 6830, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, T2P 2E7. APAzine issue.

“Mailing Comments on FAPA #296”: “Alphabet Soup #71: ‘You can find absolutely anything on the Internet.’ Speaking as someone who is doing a lot of research on the Internet [...] I disagree.” Me too. As far back as 1994, I used to hear that you could find absolutely anything on the Internet, but my mileage varied. The people who said this must have had very ordinary interests. If you’re interested in fish, you’ll be blown away that there are whole entire websites about fish! The first time I heard you could find absolutely anything on the Internet, I was looking for details about the 1982 Pac-Man animated series, and I was out of luck. Sure, in realistic terms, it was a long shot, but isn't the Internet supposed to have absolutely anything?

"Mailing Comments on FAPA #297": "For FAPA: 'Books are heavy and have very little value second hand.' [...] I have slowly begun to start thinning them out and dumping them off at the Co-Op Book Exchange or other giveaway outlets. [...] I expect that it will be a race between my thinning them out to people who will read them and my death, when my heirs will dump them all into the recycle bin." I have to keep one eye on my parents to make sure they aren't recycling or donating to charity books from the 1970s and 1980s that have sentimental value to me. A few months ago I was at the bank and saw what looked like several classic books from my father's collection for sale. By the time I'd checked with my parents and confirmed that my father had dumped a lot of books at the Richmond Hospital Foundation Auxiliary, it was too late—the bank's sale was over and the books had disappeared. Those could have been the exact copies I read as a child, and I may never find them again.
